STEVENS OUTPLAYS MIDD OCTOBER 27

After Leading 6-0 at the End of First Half Midd Weakens and Loses 22-6

On Saturday, October 27, Middlebury played her annual game with Stevens but contrary to the last two years she was forced to taste defeat from the Engineers by the score of 22-6. The game was loosely played and Middlebury suffered from penalties which came at inopportune times.

Middlebury kicked off to Stevens, which fumbled the ball on the second play. Middlebury recovered the fumble and then began a march towards the Stevens goal. Murnane was sent around left end and made thirty-five yards and then "Brainy" Bower carried the ball over for Midd's only touchdown. This gave the boys quite a bit of confidence and they held the Stevens eleven during the remainder of the first half.

When the second half opened the Blue eleven seemed to have lost considerable of its pep and began to fumble the ball continually. Stevens saw their opportunity to avenge the defeats of former years and started a hard attack upon the Midd line. Time after time Bloss, the Stevens captain, would make big gains around our ends or Ford would carry the ball toward the Midd goal thru the weakening Blue and White line. On one of his runs around right end Bloss carried the ball over for a touchdown and Goodale kicked the goal. Middlebury then took a brace and worked the ball down into Stevens territory only to lose the ground she had gained by being penalized. After working a neat forward pass for ten yards it looked as if Midd was going to cross the Stevens line again but Stevens held and Midd was forced to punt. Bloss received the punt and with great interference raced thru the Midd eleven fifty-five yards for a second touchdown.

The ball was then kept near the center of the field until Benjamin, who had replaced Bloss in the Stevens backfield, in order to uphold the good work of his predecessor scored the final touchdown bringing the score up to 22. Just before the final touchdown Murnane was thrown for a safety in a long punt by Ford. Bloss and Johnson starred for Stevens while Bower and Myrick were the mainstays of the Blue and White. At this game Stevens had more men to draw from than did Midd.

MIDDLEBURY COLLEGE TAKES ACTIVE PART IN RAISING LIBERTY LOAN

$1,000 Liberty Bond Presented By Students to the College Toward $300,000 Trust Fund

Last commencement President Thomas received an anonymous offer of $100,000 to be devoted to the enlargement of the present endowment fund, provided the college would raise $200,000 before July 1, 1918.

This is indeed a wonderful opportunity for the college, it means the increase of the present endowment fund by one third or an increased yearly income of between ten and fifteen thousand dollars with all the infinite possibilities which that holds for the improvement and expansion of the college. It is especially welcomed just now in war time when the college is straining its every nerve to keep the curriculum and the personnel of the faculty up to their former high standards at a period when the enrollment is smaller than it has been for several years past.

However, the offer entails endless responsibilities on the part of the students, faculty, alumni and friends of the college. $200,000 is no small amount for a college such as Middlebury to raise. The students come from homes of moderate circumstances. Affluence is the exception which proves the rule and in many cases the students are here because of much sacrifice on the part of their parents and themselves.

But one thing Middlebury men and women have and that is an intense loyalty to their Alma Mater. This they have once more proved by their immediate response to the call of her President.

Friday morning, October 19, after chapel service President Thomas made an announcement of the anonymous offer which he had received. Then he told of the fine idea which he had conceived, that of helping our college and our country at the same time. His proposal was as follows: That the students of Middlebury College should purchase a $1,000 Liberty Loan Bond to be presented to the college. Some of us rather gasped at the sum proposed but all resolved that we would try and try hard to reach the goal. For are not we, the students of today, enjoying advantages for which students in the past sacrificed that we might have them. Surely it was our duty to pass on the good work to the students of the future. The world has progressed by the work of far-seeing, intelligent men, who, knowing how much education has meant to them have wished posterity to have at least as good an education and if possible a better one. For the benefit of the Middlebury students that are to be, we, the Middlebury students of today, have entered whole heartedly into the work of making this project a success. The work of securing subscriptions was placed in the hands of the presidents and vice presidents of the various classes. The students were asked to pledge at least $3.30 each and were urged to give more where circumstances permitted as it was realized that to some students the pledging of even that amount would be an utter impossibility. The canvass was conducted throughout the week of October 22. Saturday morning after the chapel service Dean Wright announced that the goal had been reached and passed, the total amount being $1004.80. Of this sum $455.50 was contributed by the men and $549.30 by the women. Per capita the senior women had the highest sum to their credit the average being $4.65.

The appeal is now going out to the alumni and friends of the college. Knowing their loyal support in the past we hope to be able to announce soon that the entire $200,000 has been raised.

First Inter-Class Contest

Saturday afternoon, October 27, on Porter Field, occurred the first of those all important contests between the two lower classes, the football game.

No two opposing armies ever faced each other with more determination to win, than did the sophmores and freshmen on that memorable afternoon. The sophmores seemed conscious of their superiority and did not intend to be beaten by a bunch of freshmen. The freshmen on the other hand were anxious to prove their worth and chastise their oppressors.

Thus with determination stamped on each manly form the battle began. The first quarter was fought hard and fast. but during this time the sophomore right half, E. Ross, caught a forward pass and running half the length of the field carried the ball across the goal for the first touchdown.

The second quarter was replete with thrills but barren of results. The supreme moment came in the third quarter when Hinchey of the sophomore aggregation captured the ball on a fumble by his opponents and with a clear field before him ran swift as a deer and straight as an arrow until he had planted the ball firmly on the ground just posterior to the freshman goal. It was truly a brilliant play. The grandstand rang with applause and the co-ed section ceased their knitting to do homage to the new hero. Ross kicked the goal successfully and so overjoyed were the sophs that they celebrated by pushing their full back, Vroom, over the line for an additional touchdown. Growing more haughty, they chose McSweeney to make another in the fourth quarter which he willingly did. Here he became confused and uttered various mystic, masonic expressions. The referee misunderstood certain of these as profanity and suggested that he retire to the smoking-room below. It is too bad that referees have little sense of humor.

The Liberty Loan

Middlebury students are very conservative and require strong leadership to put through a really important enterprise. Although the war has been in progress many months, the resident members of our college have hardly begun to realize that we have any serious obligations in relation to it. Outside of a few, and this exception includes the large number now in active service, we have done practically nothing to serve our country or sacrifice constructively in this crucial time.

We have succeded in a $1000 Liberty Bond campaign, but this is very small in comparison with what other similar institutions have done. In many cases the goal set has been far exceeded, but we can boast of no such thing. Yet we need not measure our patriotism in terms of Liberty Bonds. Were we serving in some other substantial way, we would have done equally well. The man who today loafs in his room or drags himself aimlessly about the campus is a traitor to the call to American manhood. Abundant opportunities are right at hand for the full exercise of all our powers. In this respect we have signally failed.

Pleasure as Usual?

It is now seven months since the United States entered the world war. As yet the most visible evidences of the fact that we are at war are the greater number of men in uniform, the campaign for the sale of Liberty Bonds, and the occasional patriotic demonstrations held on such occasions as the departure of drafted men for the training camps.

The grimness and butchery of war have not yet come home to us by experience.

Some of our fellow students are soon to see war as it is, stripped of its halo of pomp and glamor, revealed in all of its brutal hideousness.

In view of the experiences which these men will undergo, what shall be the spirit of those of us who remain a home? Shall we say "Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we may be drafted?" Shall our motto be "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined?"

Such an attitude would be decidedly selfish and unpatriotic; selfish because it evidences an unwillingness on our part to give up anything which contributes to our own pleasure, and unpatriotic because we are being urged by the government to conserve our resources and to eliminate waste and extravagance. The freshmen have shown a commendable spirit in voting not only to give up their banquet but to apply the money which would have been spent for that purpose toward purchasing a Liberty bond for the college. Shall the three upper classes fall short of the ideal which the freshmen have set? Can we with a clear conscience indulge in a sophomore hop, a junior prom and play, and a senior ball and concert, when our college mates who offered their lives at the call of the nation are undergoing hardships which it is in our power to mitigate? If we must have these functions let us make them simple and informal, and let the money which would ordinarily be spent for music and decorations be given to the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., or our own War Service Committee, for the comfort of our boys in the trenches and on the sea.

We are not advocating a total abstinence from all forms of social intercourse whatever, but we do protest against extravagance in our social functions. Let us have cheerfulness, but not frivolity. It is entirely possible to have a good time without 'blowing in' a whole lot of money which might better be given to some constructive agency.

Hepburn Hall Regulations

On October 19 the men of Hepburn Hall met in the social hall to discuss the reestablishing of quiet hours for the dormitory. In ordcr to avert a lot of red tape it was decided to let the Senior Council pick two men from each floor to act as monitors for that floor and also to draw up a set of rules and regulations by which these monitors can govern their respective floors. The hours from 7 to 10 were picked as temporary quiet hours until the Senior Council present their set of rules for the approval of the men.

Middlebury Lunch

At the suggestion of Supt. Wright, of St. Albans, the Middlebury educators in attendance at the State Teachers Convention in St. Albans got together for an informal lunch on Friday, October 26. There were twenty-five loyal alumni in the party who passed the hour of lunch in conversation, cheering and singing patriotic songs. The affair was a success and the teachers are already looking forward to a larger gathering of Middlebury educators at the next annual convention. In justice to the freshmen it should be said that the score does not fairly represent their ability. Many of them played well, especially Mercer and L. Brown but they lacked team work as well as bean work.

The sophomores played a steadier game and gave more evidence of a well balanced football machine. The score was sophomores 25, freshmen 0.

Professor Lawrence Invites Students

Professor Lawrence's class for the study of Current Social Problems, meets in the Congregational church each Sunday immediately after the preaching service. To suit the convenience of many of its members, the class always ends its session not later than ten minutes before one. A hearty welcome is extended to all who care to come. It is hoped that this will increasingly become a community class, attended by members of any or no church. Students of the college are especially invited.

Y. W. C. A. Activities

Miss Adelaide Fairbank of New York was a guest of the Young Women's Christian Association October 25 and 26. Miss Fairbank is a representative of the Student Volunteer movement and her mission in Middlebury was to awaken an interest in the cause. Miss Fairbank lived in India until she was twelve years old when she came to this country to complete her education. She graduated from Mt. Holyoke College in 1915 and then returned to India where she spent the next two years as a missionary. Thursday afternoon at the weekly religious meeting of the Association Miss Fairbank told the girls of some of the work and ideals of the Y. W. C. A. That evening at Pearsons Hall she displayed Indian costumes and photographs and gave an interesting talk concerning them. Later in the evening Miss Fairbank met with the cabinet for the purpose of discussing some of the problems of the Middlebury Association.

During her stay she also met with the Silver Bay club and the Missionary and Bible Study committees.

Military Training

Military training has started in Middlebury. Only a small beginnlng has been made, it is true. Only with steadiness and perseverance can satisfactory results be obtained. Nothing was ever done without a start, nor was anything ever accomplished by empty crabbing. Earnest, constructive criticism and whole hearted support from every man in college who can give it is needed. It is a big task for college students to establish such an institution as military training unaided by faculty co-operation. The work of the next six weeks or two months is going to tell—if we make it. If we show the true spirit of willingness, and earnestness of purpose, recognition from the faculty cannot be withheld.

This is not a matter of the present year only. Next year, and the next are our chief concern. We are facing a three years' war and probable military service under the nation after that. Military training this year means a more efficient training next year. Let's go to it and give our loyal support to those who are trying to make military training a real success.

Sophomore-Freshman Rope Pull

At the request of the Senior Council, the old time custom of the tug-o'-war between the freshman and sophomore classes was renewed October 20. A long rope was stretched across one corner of the pond. At a signal from the Senior Council, the pulling began. The rope lasted exactly one and one-fourth seconds. Three more attempts resulted in the same success. The event was finally considered a huge victory for the Senior Council, as neither team had to suffer the humiliation of being drawn through the briny deep by the other.

Opportunities on Band and Orchestra

There are a number of positions on the college band which are open to any musicians among the men who desire to try out for these positions. The college owns a number of band instruments, and any student who wishes to learn to play may receive instruction, free of charge, by applying to Mr. Vittum. The same opportunities are open to any students, women as well as men, who wish to try out for positions on the college orchestra. There is undoubtedly considerable musical ability among the student body, and there is no reason why we should not have a band and an orchestra which could furnish the very best kind of music upon any college occasion such as Charter Day or Commencement.

The Harvard Crimson in its issue of last week seems to have the right idea about examinations. "There is a lull in the busy life of the university. The faculty makes ready its first attack upon the undergraduates—the hour examinations are at hand * * * * * * The hour exams are a necessary evil and must be taken in a philosophic way. They are merely a diversion invented by the faculty to break the monotony of recitations. The best way to foil these intellectual monsters is to pass their tests."
